By Customer These stories highlight the thinking of the Silver Age, with the first outings of the Justice League of America. These stories often follow the formula originally set up by the Justice Society in the Golden Age, where the group splits up to take care of different aspects of the threat. Unlike what would happen in a few years time, Batman and Superman did not appear on the covers for these stories even if in the story itself, and sometimes might be doing something else so won't be in the story. When Batman hits the tv screen, all that changes. Gardner Fox does his usual brilliant job with the stories. In 26 pages he is telling a story that nowadays would probably take 5 issues and be issued in its own trade. No decompression here! The listing isn't correct for this, giving the hardback contents instead of the trade paperback contents. It does have Brave and Bold 28-30, but only Justice League 1-8, not 1-16. It does, however, include Mystery in Space 75 (included in the book just after the Justice League story with Kanjar Ro). 8 of 8 people found the following review helpful. A Wonderful Trip to a Simpler Time By Cody Obviously your enjoyment of any of these Silver Age volumes mainly hinges on if you like the way comics of the 60s were written. It's not my favorite decade to read from, but most of the stories in this collection surpassed my expectations and I really loved reading this. The first story ever is the famous Starro story line, which is as awesome as people say. For people who prefer art over story then this is definitely for you. The art was really consistent and the colors just pop off the page. There's so much hope and fun radiating off these characters that I couldn't help but get sucked in with them. I read with a smile on my face the whole time. One of the more surprising aspects I found about this book is the fact that whenever I'd start an issue I thought it would be very silly and wouldn't appeal to me, however, after reading a few pages I'd just get sucked in and I'll be hooked until the end of the issue. I don't know what it is about these stories, but I've fallen in love with this era of the Justice League. I will say that like any comic there are some really good issues and a few that are okay in this collection. Another thing I really loved about this beginning, is the fact that the whole roster is rarely used. Characters have their own titles, so if Gardner Fox (the writer) doesn't want to use someone he'll just say they're busy on a case. In fact, Superman and Batman have a good number of issues where they don't appear. Superman is either off in Space or in another dimension while Batman is on a case. Because every modern Justice League comic always had Batman and Superman on the forefront and used them in every way possible to promote the team I found it very refreshing to see these two big characters take a step back for the other League members to bond and grow as a team. Overall I really enjoyed this volume of Silver Age Justice League of America stories, and I think this is a must buy for any die hard JL fan. 6 of 6 people found the following review helpful. Awesome! You can not beat these collected volumes By Aaron Drake Awesome! You can not beat these collected volumes, if you remember the Showcase Presents collections, which were all black white on cheaper newsprint, these are all COLOR! on better quality paper. Highly recommend.

More than 300 pages of the famous super-teams inaugural exploits! Superman. Batman. Wonder Woman. The Flash. Green Lantern. Aquaman. The Martian Manhunter. Green Arrow. As individuals, their names are legend. Together, they are even greater than the sum of their parts. They are the Justice League of America, and they stand for truth, justice and the American way! Since they were first commissioned by renowned DC Comics editor Julius Schwartz in 1960, the Justice League has thrilled audiences across the globe in tales that span time and space. Collects THE BRAVE AND THE BOLD #28-30, JUSTICE LEAGUE OF AMERICA #1-8 and MYSTERY IN SPACE #75, and includes the classic tales Doom of the Star Diamond, The Slave Ship of Space and Starro the Conqueror!

About the Author As much as any writer, Gardner Fox helped create the tone and feel of the Batman stories of the 1960s. Fox was an attorney who began his prolific and innovative second career as a writer in the late 1930s on Batman and went on to create such Golden Age classics as the original Flash, Hawkman, Starman, Doctor Fate, and the Justice Society of America. His influence extended throughout the 1950s and 1960s when, until his retirement from DC Comics in 1968, he created and/or wrote such memorable features as the Justice League of America, Adam Strange, the Atom, Hawkman, and, of course, Batman, all under the auspices of legendary comics editor Julius Schwartz. Until his death in 1986, Gardner Fox continued writing comics and novels. He published over 100 books in numerous genres, some under the pseudonyms of Jefferson Cooper and Bart Sommers, as well as many fantasy novels under his own name.
