There are shades of The Twilight Zone, Lost and Stand by Me in The Bunker, but it's also a bit of a reverse Back to the Future situation: They're told what will happen, but each character will prime themselves differently.-- USA TODAY Highly recommended.-- AINT IT COOL NEWS THE BUNKER tells the story of five friends who find mysterious letters inside a time capsule they buried long ago. And it's no wonder none of them remember writing the letters; they're written by their future selves. To add to the mystery, each one warns of an impending apocalypse, which they apparently caused. . . . Stellar. - THE NERDIST In volume 2 of this ongoing series, the future has not been saved. A bomb tore a chunk out of San Francisco. Daniel began his job at Aspire, following in his father's footsteps. Will the apocalypse keep happening? Or will something trigger a change in the future? A future where Grady Potts wields his power as president to his advantage. Where Daniel has locked himself away, desperately seeking a cure for the virus. Where Heidi and Billy are criminals. Where Natasha is forced to help Grady find a way to travel into the past... ..but for what purpose? To help change the future? Or to preserve it?
