From Fantagraphics : The Comics Journal #302 (The Comics Journal) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The Comics Journal #302 (The Comics Journal):

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five Stars By Mike DeLisa Comics JHournal always has interesting criticism of the comix industry and individual works. This massive tome is no exception. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Excellent book. By Aug Stone Kim Thompson has a long interview with French comics legend Jacques Tardi. There's not much info on Tardi in English so this is much appreciated. Huge book, over 600 pages. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. If you like comis you are gonna love this By A. G. Loeffler This is for the comic book nut. If you just kinda enjoy comic, don't get this. If you LOVE everything about them, buy now.

This comics criticism annual feature career-spanning interviews with Maurice Sendak and Jacques Tardi, a kids comics roundtable moderated by Art Spiegelman, and much more. The newly formatted, 600+ page Comics Journal has proved a resounding success with 2011s edition, featuring a cover and interview with R. Crumb, instantly selling out. 2012s #302 is sure to prove just as critically and commercially exciting to comics readers worldwide. This editions cover feature is a long, intimate interview-portrait with and of Maurice Sendak, the greatest and most successful childrens book author of the 20th and 21st century, the author of Where the Wild Things Are, In the Night Kitchen, Outside Over There, Higglety Pigglety Pop, and the illustrator of works by Herman Melville, Leo Tolstoy, and Randall Jarrell. In his longest published interview, Sendak looks back over a career spanning over 60 years and talks to Gary Groth about art, life, and death (especially death), how his childhood, his parents, and his siblings affected his art and outlook, his search for meaning and also, on the lighter side, about his love (and hate) of movies. Kim Thompson conducts a career-spanning interview with French graphic novel pioneer Jacques Tardi; the two will explore the Eisner Award-winners genre-spanning oeuvre comprising historical fiction, action-adventure, crime-thriller, icepunk and more. Art Spiegelman conducts a wide-ranging aesthetic colloquy on classic kids comics (Carl Barkss Donald Duck, John Stanleys Little Lulu, Sheldon Mayers Sugar and Spike, and many more) with a group of comics critics and historians. Michael Dooley moderates a roundtable discussion with Robert Williams, Joe Coleman, Marc Bell, and Esther Pearl Watson about the relationship between fine art and comics. Bob Levin provides a revelatory investigation of the twisted history of the Keep on Truckin litigation and a fascinating biographical portrait of R. Crumbs lawyer, Albert Morse. Warren Bernard writes a groundbreaking historical investigation of the 1954 Senate Subcommittee Hearing on Juvenile Delinquency. Plus: How to Draw Buz Sawyer by renowned newspaper cartoonist Roy Crane (and a previously unpublished interview), comics by Lewis Trondheim in English for the first time, Tim Kreider on Chester Brown, a visual gallery of and commentary on proto-comics, and more. The Comics Journal has been for 37 years the worlds foremost critical magazine about comics. It is now more vital than ever, a gigantic print compendium of critiques, interviews, and comics. Yes
