Leslie Stein : Time Clock (Vol. 3) (Eye of the Majestic Creature) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Time Clock (Vol. 3) (Eye of the Majestic Creature):

Brooklynite Larrybear catches up with her anthropomorphic friends, copes with a drinking problem, and tries to manage a restaurant during a hurricane in the latest installment of the surreal graphic novel series. In the third volume of her series, our protagonist Larrybear meets her new nemesis, visits her anthropomorphic guitar Marshmallow, and ponders her future as she manages a restaurant in Brooklyn. Things go awry when a hurricane arrives and the bar is packed, with no deliveries and plumbing problems. This is doing nothing to help Larrys ever-worsening drinking problem Black white illustrations throughout.

Stein makes witty, moving observations about flaky friends, awkward family moments, absurd jobs, hangovers, and loneliness, with a unique voice and visual style. - Bandcamp Daily A curious mixture of cartoon and creepy. - Comics Alternative For a gloriously rewarding and exceptionally enticing cartoon experience one no serious fan of fun and narrative art can afford to miss you simply must spend a few hours with Time Clock. - Comics One of the most experimental and creative cartoonists of our time. - Comics Tavern Stein seamlessly weaves fantasy into the quotidian. - Largehearted Boy Part stoner comedy, part artists self-examination, containing as many laughs as it does thoughtful musings. - Mental Floss

About the Author Leslie Stein was born and raised in Evanston, Illinois. She attended the San Francisco Art Institute in 2000, moved to New York and graduated from the School of Visual Arts in 2004. Her early interest in comics and cartooning was revitalized around the turn of the century by her introduction to such independent/alternative cartoonists as Jim Woodring and Gilbert Hernandez. She has self-published her own comics series, Eye of the Majestic Creature, since 2005, the short stories from which have been published in two Majestic Creature collections to date. She plays guitar and sings in the band Prince Ruperts Drops. She lives in Brooklyn.
